LEATHER BAG CARE GUIDE

Taking care of your Bags & Purses

Taking Care of your Investment

KEEPING YOUR BAG CLEAN

Dirt that is allowed to remain on the leather surface for prolonged periods is the main cause of damage to leather and dye transfer is of particular concern to owners of pale coloured leather bags. The best way to ensure your leather remains in the best condition is to ensure that it is kept clean.

Pigment Coated Leather (may also be known as Protected, Finished)

Over time dirt and body oils can destroy the pigment coating and finish that has been applied at the tannery to protect your leather surface. Once this finish has broken down it means expensive repair bills.

Keeping your leather dirt free will prolong the life of the finish.

Regular cleaning will ensure that dirt is not allowed to build up.

Using a leather protector will help to resist staining from spills and make cleaning more effective each time.

Aniline Style Leather

This is very absorbent leather and spillages can cause permanent stains that will be expensive or maybe impossible to remove.

Protecting your leather is crucial and this together with regular cleaning will help prolong the life of your leather.

Love my Bag products can be used on all leather finishes except for Nubuck or Suede which have their own care products.

KEEPING YOUR BAG HEALTHY

Just think about how many places your handbag, purse, man bag or briefcase visits in the course of a day:

- In your Car
- On the train or bus
- In the toilet
- In a Restaurant
- In a Pub or Nightclub

.....and generally speaking always on the floor.

Think then about where you put your bag when you get home:

- On the floor
- On the kitchen worktop
- On the dining table

Microbiological tests have been carried out on samples taken from many different bags.

The results were quite disturbing..., not only were bacteria found but high levels of potentially harmful bacteria which included:

E-Coli

Salmonella

Pseudomonas

Staphylococcus Aurous

So your well travelled bag could be bringing home lots of unwanted serious infections.

Regular bag cleaning will reduce the risk of contamination and infection.
